ASSIGNMENT 112-- Wendy Nyasha Mahenga

INTRODUCTION TO PERSONAL WORKPLACE SKILLS

Timekeeping:

i. I demonstrated exceptional punctuality by arriving early to prepare and marinate all meats, ensuring a timely start and setting myself up for success.
ii. When things did not go well, I should have had a back up plan in place to minimize delays.
iii. Timekeeping is crucial in the workplace because it enables teams to work together seamlessly, avoiding delays and ensure every task stays on track.

Planning:

i. I excelled in planning by thoroughly preparing and organizing resources, enabling us to execute tasks and achieve our best results.
ii. When things did not go well, I should have developed a more detailed back up plan to address unexpected setbacks.
iii. Planning is essential in the workplace because it enables individuals and teams to achieve goals and objectives and mitigate risks.

Communication skills:

i. I effectively communicated with team members, providing regular updates and progress reports, and adapting my communication style to suit different audience and needs.
ii. When things did not go well, I should have been more clear and concise in any messaging, asked more questions to ensure understanding and provided more regular feedback.
iii. Effective communication is vital in the workplace because it enables individuals and teams to work together seamlessly, achieve goals and build strong relationships with colleagues.

Seeking help and advice:

i. I proactively sought guidance from experienced professional and peers, gaining valuable insights and expertise to improve my skills and techniques.
ii. When things did not go well, I should have asked more specific and targeted questions, sought help sooner and been more open-minded to different perspectives and suggestions.
iii. Seeking help and advice is essential in the workplace because it demonstrates humility and willingness to learn, leading to personal and professional growth and success.

Customer service:

i. I effectively served customers by actively listening to their needs and concerns, responding promptly to their inquiries and issues, and exceeding their expectations.

ii. When did not go well, I should have turned negative experience into positive ones, built trust and shown commitment to customer satisfaction.
iii. Customer service is crucial in the workplace because it shows respect and value for customers' business, built trust and loyalty.

Handling team and customer requests:

i. I effectively handled requests by listening carefully, clarifying expectations and showing a positive and willing attitude.
ii. When things did not go well, I should have asked more clarifying questions and set more realistic expectations and time lines.
iii. Effectively handling team customer requests demonstrates a positive and willing attitude, ensuring positive outcomes.

Overcoming barriers to communication:

i. i effectively addressed communication barriers by being open minded and flexible , avoiding jargon and technical terms.
ii. When things did not go well, I should have used alternative communication methods like visual aids and different languages.
iii. Overcoming barriers to communication ensures clear understanding and avoids misunderstandings, leading to successful outcomes.